In the fifth year of the war the Canadian army in France is still playing its part. Although the Dominion has raised only hundreds of thousands of men in contrast with the millions of Great Britain, France, and the United States, the Canadians have built up a brilliant reputation as fighters of great resourcefulness and determination. Vimy Ridge was only one of their many exploits though it will always be one of the best remembered. The Canadians have borne the brunt of the terrible fighting at Lens, and if, as seems likely at this writing, that city is at last being given up by the Germans, no troops will have greater satisfaction in the long-expected result than the Canadians.

(Clinedinst from Underwood.)

BRIG. GEN. JOHN E. MAHONEY, another Marine Corps officer who has just been promoted. He has seen active service in almost every country where the Marines have been on duty. He took part in the Spanish war, the operations in the Philippines, in Mexico, Haiti, and Santo Domingo.
(Underwood & Underwood.)

MAJOR GENERAL BEAUMONT B. BUCK, of the American Expeditionary Force in France, to whom General Pershing has awarded the Distinguished Service cross for conspicuous gallantry and heroic leadership in command. He is the first American general to be so distinguished in the present war.
(Clinedinst from Underwood.)

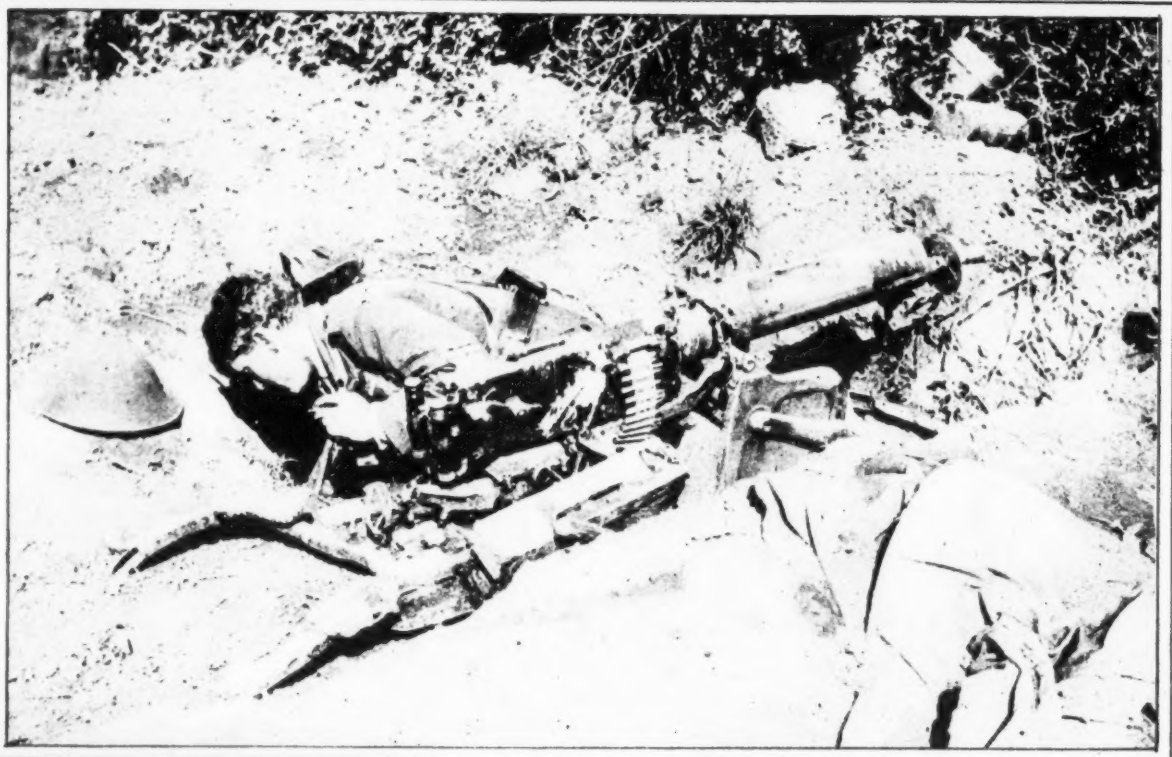

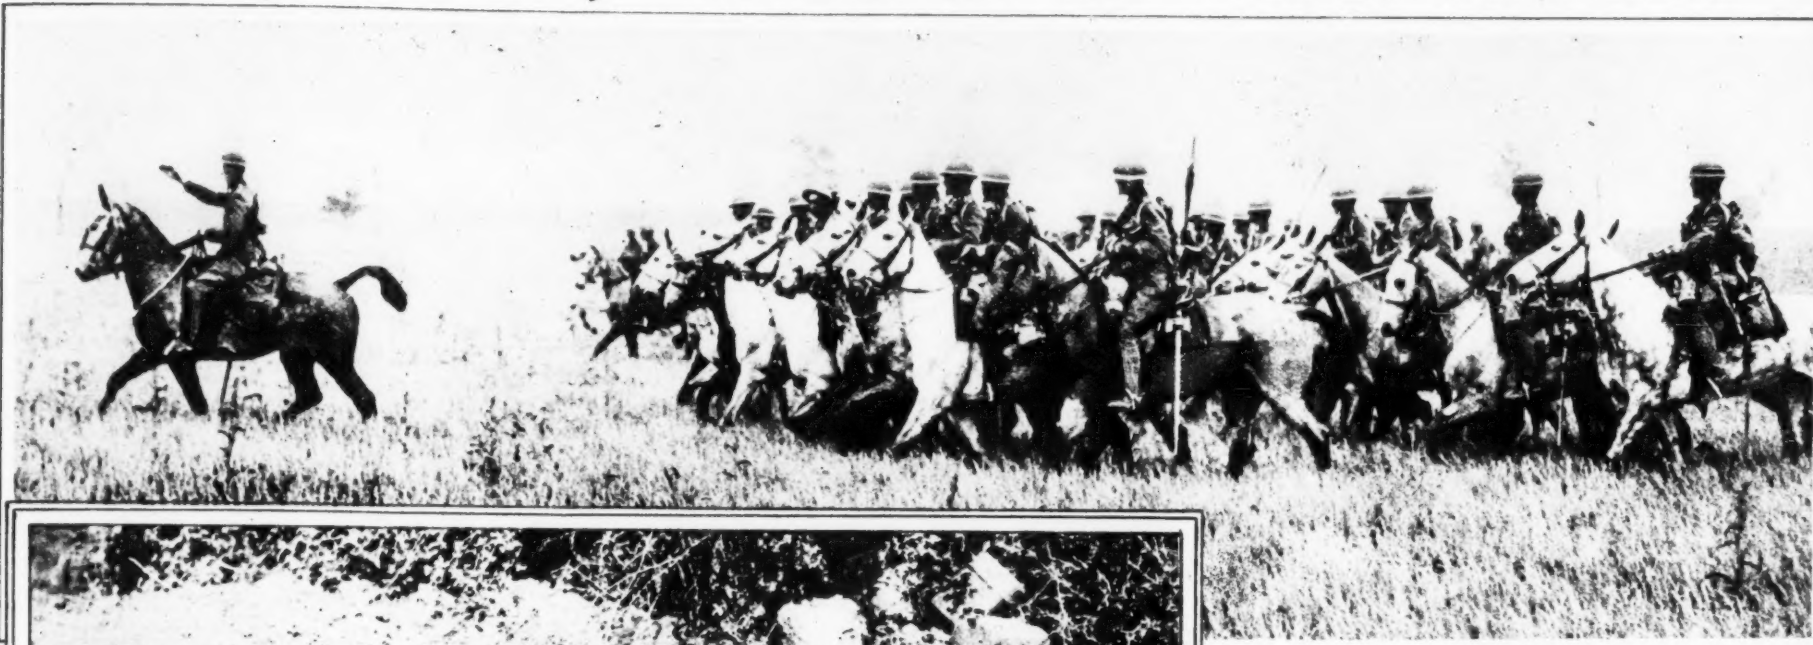

BRIG. GEN. FRANK R. MCCOY, recently promoted, is a cavalry officer with a record of twenty-five years' service. He has also served on the General Staff and at the Army War College. General McCoy is a native of Pennsylvania.
(Clinedinst from Underwood.)

MAJOR GEN. CHARLES W. KUTZ, of the Corps of Engineers, who has been appointed commander at Camp Humphreys, Va. He has seen service in France and his new appointment is in line with the policy of the War Department to man the training camps for the new armies with men who have been at the front.

The most recent phase of the great battle on the western front has been the work of the British in smashing what the Germans supposed was an impregnable defense line between Queant and Drocourt, the so-called Hindenburg line. The progress of the British toward Cambrai has been the most important development since the opening of the allied offensive. In some places the British positions are already six miles further east than they have been any time since 1914. At this writing, the advance continues most satisfactorily and augurs well for ultimate success. One of the best indications of the German breakdown is that the British are able to use cavalry to harass the retreating troops.

The seven weeks that have passed since the Allies initiated the present offensive have seen the greatest change in the war since its beginning. The extent of this change is not to be measured so much by the territory actually regained as by the fact that the Germans are becoming more and more demoralized, and that they have been outmanoeuvred and outfought. While the main interest in the fighting in the western theatre of the war has shifted to the British front, the French, largely aided by the Americans, are exerting an enormous pressure against the enemy in the southern sectors. So fierce have the French assaults in the battle for the plateau north of Soissons been that the ground is literally covered with German dead. The first line of defense on the plateau is entirely in French hands, and breaches have been made in the second line. Soissons has thus more "elbow room," and the River Ailette, with its formidable defense works, is entirely held by General Mangin as far south as the Chauny-Terny-Sorny road.

Since the outbreak of the war in 1914 Switzerland has witnessed numerous pitiful armies of refugees. In the above photograph we see peasants and their families from the northern part of France who have been turned out of their homes and who are being sent to southern France by way of Switzerland. The Swiss have been most generous in giving these unfortunates a cordial welcome, supplying them with food, clothing, and temporary shelter. The Swiss citizen soldiers have taken a prominent part in the work, and above we see some of them at Geneva caring for the babies as if they were their own.

*T*HERE is never any question as to what you will see when you and the family pick up and come along to The Rivoli and The Rialto.

You know beforehand that the pictures on the program will be pictures worth your while and worth your time. Pictures of dramatic value; pictures of comedy and laughs; pictures of the world and its teeming activities and its strange places and stranger people; pictures of the unusual; moving, stirring pictures of the devastating world drama of nations in arms.

Because it must be a Rivoli and a Rialto kind of picture before it can find a place on their program.

These discriminating programs are selected with the one idea that they must please and entertain and divert and interest the finest, most exacting clientele of any motion-picture theatres in the world.

When it comes to the great players of the screen and stage, you'll see them first in their finest pictures at The Rivoli and The Rialto—"foremost stars superbly directed in clean motion pictures." You'll see them in the better pictures of the motion picture art—the better pictures bearing the Paramount and Artcraft trade-marks.
